CALL FOR SPONSORS

The 2019 Biennial CSEB Conference is entitled, "Epidemiology and Biostatistics at the Nexus of Complex Health Challenges". The aim of the conference is to highlight how epidemiology and biostatistics are key to addressing complex health challenges across diverse research, practice, and policy settings. These professionals are employed in academic, public health, and industry settings to conduct research on topics that encompass the Canadian Institutes of Health Research's four pillars of health research, namely biomedical, clinical, health systems and services, and social/cultural/environmental factors affecting population health. The conference will feature professional development workshops, student career development workshops, and multiple oral and poster presentation sessions. The conference will inspire attendees to take on new research challenges, foster mentorship and capacity-building opportunities, create multidisciplinary research collaborations, and profile new research knowledge, tools, and approaches of interest to the disciplines of epidemiology and biostatistics.

We hope you will support this important conference. For your convenience, this package outlines the many ways you can support the conference, as well as the many benefits of being a conference sponsor.
